9. Rationale for Change(s) – if rationale involves accreditation requirements, please include specific references to those.
The addition of MUS 317 provides music education majors the opportunity to fulfill the required course, EDC 317, and explore instructional media materials directly related to their field of study. Topics include audio/video materials, notation software, music sequencing software, website design software, internet/web-based education, and the development of electronic portfolios.

Prior to pursuing this course change, this proposal was discussed with administrators responsible for overseeing EDC 317 by members of our music education faculty. It was determined that both courses could co-exist.

In a separate section of this proposal I have included the programs of study from several of our benchmark institutions to support and document the need to add this course for our students.

Thanks for your note. MUS 317 will be offered in addition to EDC 317. Students may choose one or the other in order to fulfill the requirement.

Thanks,

George Boulden

Good morning! I am writing in regards to the program change proposal for the bachelor of music in Music Education (attached).

The description of the change in #7 and the rationale for the change in #9 are not clear to me. I understand that MUS 317 is to be added as a core requirement, but it is not clear if MUS 317 replaces EDC 317, or if it is merely another way for students to complete a certain requirement.

Could you please reply back to me with a clarification? Upon receipt, this item (and MUS 317) will be ready for review via web transmittals, and a likely effective date of fall 2010.

Thank you,
Sheila
