CLA 628: Seminar in Late Antique and Post-Imperial Latin Literature

SAMPLE SYLLABUS

Ammianus Marcellinus

INTRODUCTION

Ammianus Marcellinus (c. 330-395 C.E.) is often called "the last great Roman historian." He is almost certainly the last great Roman historian to write in Latin and saw himself continuing in the tradition of Tacitus. This is all the more notable since Ammianus was, in fact, a Greek born in Antioch. He is one of the most important historians of the later Roman empire and the most important for events immediately after Constantine. He accompanied the emperor Julian on the campaign against Persia in 363 which cost the young emperor his life. After 378 he settled in Rome and began his history in 31 books, picking up where Tacitus left off, covering the period from 96 to 378 C.E. Books 1-13 have been lost and the extant narrative begins in the year 353, in the last half of the reign of Constantius II (Constantine's son). We will be reading the section of the work dealing with the reign of Julian, which forms a discreet unit and is the best source for the life of the fascinating last pagan emperor of Rome. In addition to reading, translating, and commenting upon the grammatical, literary, and historical aspects of the text, students will be asked to complete various research assignments on the voluminous recent work published on Ammianus.

TEXTS

For this course, I have ordered the Teubner edited by W. Seyfarth, reprinted with revisions in 1999 (ISBN 3519019760). Since many of you will be unfamiliar with the later Roman Empire, I have also ordered the Penguin translation by Walter Hamilton, Ammianus Marcellinus, The Later Roman Empire, A.D. 354-378 (ISBN 0140444068) and G.W. Bowersock's handy little Julian the Apostate, published in 1978.

There is a multi-volume commentary by P. De Jonge which I will check out of the library and place in room 1043; I will check out other recent works on Ammianus and put them on the shelf there as well. For general background on the times and character of the later empire, any historical survey covering the period should prove helpful. The first 150 pages of A.H.M. Jones, The Later Roman Empire, vol. I. will in particular give a solid survey; I'll place a copy in 1043.

ASSIGNMENTS

Reading and translating the text will form the bulk of work in this course. Students will be expected to prepare the assigned text for each class and will be called upon at random to translate anywhere in the assignment. Though the entire assignment must be prepared, not all of it will necessarily be gone over in class. Students are nevertheless responsible for the entire assignment on exams, etc. If it appears useful as the course progresses, a distinction may be made in the reading load between undergraduate and graduate students. See Reading Schedule below. Students should also be aware that certain in-class sight-reading exercises are also likely.

Research assignments. Since I presume that the later empire will be new to most if not all of you, my interest is in having every student learn something about this period, according to their interests. And there is a wealth of interest to be had: religious change, paganism, and the rise of Christianity; the reconstruction of the empire politically and economically; the rise of autocratic monarchy; the "decline and fall" of Rome itself. I would prefer that as questions arise or you run into topics on which you would like to learn more, you will volunteer for short research assignments to uncover and present information to the rest of the class. If this proves impractical, a list of topics will be distributed for students to sign up. As the course progresses, we will determine exactly how this will be done. An oral presentation in class accompanied by written work submitted to the instructor will be the basic form of the assignment.

A major research paper will be written for this course, due at the end of the semester. Specific details and requirements for this paper will be specified in detail on a separate sheet, distributed a bit later as the course progresses.

Lastly, there will be a midterm and final translation exam.

GRADING & ATTENDANCE

Though as mentioned above we will need to work out the specifics on the research projects as the course progresses, the various assignments for this course will constitute your final grade according to the following percentages:

| reading & translation | 20% |
|-----------------------|-----|
| research assignments  | 25% |
| midterm exam          | 15% |
| final exam            | 15% |
| research paper        | 25% |

All grades will be assigned as letters: A, B, C, E (there is no D in the graduate school grade scale). For purposes of calculation, these will correspond to the usual scale of:

$$A = 4 \text{ points} \quad B = 3 \quad C = 2 \quad E = 0.$$

For the final course grade, points will averageaccording to the percentages above and final grades will given on the following scale:

```
a final average of 3.7 to 4.0 = A
3.0 to 3.69 = B
2.0 to 2.99 = C
below 2.0 = E.
```

In a class of this nature and level, attendance at every class session is expected. Unexcused absences in excess of three (3) will result in the lowering of your final mark for the course by one full grade. Please note that absences may be excused either for the reasons laid out in Student Rights and Responsibilities, or by securing my permission beforehand, or by consulting with me personally afterward in an unavoidable circumstance. I do reserve the right to reject an excuse other than those mandated in Student Rights and Responsibilities.
