Reading Day Description

Snippet from Senate Ad Hoc Calendar Committee (footnote 3)

“The fall and spring semesters would each have two Reading Days. The Reading Days would be on the Thursday and Friday of Dead Week just prior to the week of final exams. The current Dead Week restrictions on certain instructional activities would continue to apply to Reading Days. An additional restriction would apply to Reading Days, namely no required class meetings or, more generally, no “required interactions” (SR 5.2.4.2.3.1). Reading Days are not academic holidays. The summer session would not have any reading days.”
